Dear Senator Baker:

As a former resident of East Tennessee, I have followed your political career with much interest. Indeed, I was dismayed when you chose to relinquish your seat in the United States Senate a few years ago.

Now I am proud that you have accepted the position of White House Chief of Staff. President Ronald Reagan is, beyond all comparison, the greatest President in my life time, and he is deserving of the love, appreciation and support of every loyal, liberty-loving America.

With your vast experience in government, and with your great expertise, I am confident your services will be of unestimable value to President Reagan and to our country.

With kindest regards and best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Mr

The World's Bible

By DR. J. HAROLD SMITH

The Christian is the "World's Bible," and the only one it reads. Our lives are open to the world. Where one person reads the Bible, one hundred people read our lives. The men of the world can answer cold, heartless theology. They can deny the logic of the truth, but there is no reply to a Godly life, "A living epistle."

Paul writes in II Corinthians 3:2, "Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men."

And in the next verse, he writes, "Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ."

An "epistle" means a letter and the idea of the apostle is that each Christian is in his

Congratulations and thanks for our country in you accepting the responsibility in assisting President Reagan for the balance of his term.

I am sure you don't remember but I met you in Houston at a dinner for Senator Tower. At that time I told you of my forefathers coming from your home state. Your comment was "We could have come from the same bunch of pups." I have watched and admired your career in the past. I was looking forward to your possible campaign in 1988.

Please call upon me if I can be of any assistance to you in the future.

Dear Senator Baker:

It was with great enthusiasm and relief that I welcome your appointment as President Reagan's Chief of Staff. In you, the nation has a man who is himself eminently qualified to be president, so even should the president continue his extensive delegation of authority, the levers of power in the Executive Branch will be in hands every bit as capable as his own.

With this in mind, I hope you do not--in your heart of hearts--now give up any notion of being president yourself.

While your new position obviously must place such public ambition on the back-burner, politics is a funny game, and it is possible your new responsibilities and exposure will help not only President Reagan but your own long term possibilities as well. At this time, the G.O.P. field is certainly wide open, and if the Democrats go with Hart, he will be very beatable no matter how much the voters think they want a change.

I met you once at a Republican function in Santa Ana in Dec. '85. What I told you then still holds--if you ever make an effort for the presidency, please call on me for whatever help I can give you here in Orange County. You were my original top choice in 1980, and you remain so today.

Good luck in your new position, and thank you for offering your considerable talents in the service to our country--now and in the future!

Sincerely,

CHRIS NORBY

Howard Baker's new job

AT LEAST one good thing has come out of all the hassle over the bungled arms-for-hostages deal — the appointment of our own Howard Baker Jr. as White House chief of staff.

Baker, former Senate Republican leader, replaces the embattled Donald Regan, whose departure had been expected, particularly after first lady Nancy Reagan took up the cause of shoohing him out. The Tower Commission report was the nudge that was needed to send Regan on his way.

Although the review board portrayed President Reagan as being confused over the secret arms deal with Iran, much of the blame for the chaos was placed directly on Regan and other advisers.

Howard Baker is close to the president and may be just the tonic Reagan needs to bounce back and act like a responsible chief executive for the remainder of his term.

We recall that Baker, in December, urged that a special Senate committee be created to investigate the sale of arms to Iran. So that has happened.

We all know that Baker has had aspirations of being president. His first bid for the Republican nomination was in 1980.

His acceptance of the chief of staff position means that he is ruling himself out for the presidential race in 1988.

Yet, we think he has a chance to serve his country by using his plain, old Southern lawyer horse sense to keep Reagan from doing anything else foolish. He should be able to wipe away some of the tarnish on the Republican Party — resulting from the arms-for-hostage deal.

We have watched Baker's political career with interest through the years. In 1966 he became the first popularly elected Republican senator in Tennessee history. He gained national recognition in 1973 for his performance as vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee. He retired from the Senate in 1985.

We will watch with equal interest as Baker pursues his new career so near the Oval Office. We are proud of the small-town boy from Huntsville who continues to be an asset to his country.

Super colloid
Is it practical

WASHINGTON — Department of Energy officials are raising a lot of questions about their proposal to spend $6 billion in taxpayers' funds to build the world's largest atom smasher.

Scientists are split over whether the project would ever come close to paying for itself, and critics wonder why the United States cannot save money by working with either the Japanese or the West European countries on their atom smasher projects.

A major concern is where the DOE is going to get the $6 billion. It could end up coming out of many existing DOE research projects, such as a $400 million nuclear reactor research project at DOE's Oak Ridge reservation.

It also seems, so far at least, to be a strange priority for an administration that

Nursing home problem

TENNESSEE, as well as the rest of the nation, is still plagued with nursing home problems.

A state audit estimates that 46 of the nursing homes in Tennessee are "chronic violators" of health care stan-and was looking toward being governor, McWherter promised senior citizens groups he would back a bill imposing civil fines on nursing home operators who fail to meet state standards. We hope he meant it and will
